August 26th – September 11th.

Canon Dumain will depart for the General Chapter of the Institute of Christ the King Sovereign Priest, (An annual meeting of all the priest of the ICKSP) at our Seminary (our Alma Mater) in Gricigliano, near Florence, Italy.

It is at this General Chapter that the affectations of the priests are made for the next year. (Will I still be in Warren? Will I be sent somewhere else? No one know yet...) It is a time of prayer (imagine: put together 120^{ish} canons... it will be shameful if we do not pray!) but also a great time to see each other: being spread on different countries and continents, it is very good to see our dear confreres and classmates, former pastors or former altar boys... who have been ordained priests (to write it make me feel pretty old...) and to exchange some news, in order to maintain the cohesion between the members of this little big family which is the Institute.

In order to save some money, Canon Dumain will stay in Europe few more days after the Chapter, in order to visit his family. He will be back on September 11th.

During his absence, some diocesan priests will replace him to celebrate the daily sacrifice of the Mass at St. Paul. Be grateful to those priests who will drive a long way to assure the Mass Schedule.

If you have any emergency question, please, contact Abbe Kevin. He will stay to welcome them.

The Office Secretary.

If you are concerned about a case of abuse, please contact the local civil Authorities immediately.

The wisdom of St. Francis de Sales for a troubled world - 6

Jacques Maritain wrote an article published posthumously in which he suggests that, once again, at the end of time, all men, all devils will be freed from hell, thanks to the love and merits of Christ. One by one, they will be drawn out of this place of hatred and despair, and be accepted in Limbo – the place where unbaptized children are now to be found. Lucifer will be the last one to be pulled out...but the physical fire of hell will continue to burn forever, even though hell will now be empty. Any economist would object to the amazing waste of fuel!

Be it remarked that Maritain – a most faithful son of the Church – does not say that it will be so, but only that He who can change bread into his body at the words of consecration, could also by means of a miracle change the will of those who are condemned by their own sins. (Idees Eschatologiques, p. 26. Published in Approches sans entraves).

Hans Urs von Balthasar has been similarly interpreted by some in his book: Dare We Hope That All Men Will Be Saved? In this context, two things should be mentioned: there is a fundamental difference by making suggestions which can be seriously questioned for not being in conformity with the traditional teaching of the Church, and making a claim that a position is true, even though in disagreement with the Magisterium. This applies to the two thinkers I have just mentioned. They would definitely submit to the Church's judgment. One of the many great blessings of Catholicism is that it has a Magisterium - blessed by infallibility.

Another great mind to whom we are very indebted is Tertullian. Alas, he too at the end of his life was accused to falling into Montanism.

No human mind, great and noble as it is, is infallible. Humility is the greatest protection against error. Great thinkers should, like St. Augustine, write a retractions.
