FROM THE DESK OF THE RECTOR

Very dear faithful,

On Thursday this week, we had a wonderful celebration of Corpus Christi with a procession in our Oratory campus. May Our Eucharistic Lord shower you all with many graces for giving due honor to His Divine Majesty.

Unfortunately, Monsignor could not make it yesterday since his flight from Tucson was cancelled. He wrote a letter that is posted in the vestibule. Please pray that the Monsignor's travels go well for the remainder of his trip. I will convey to him your good wishes and prayers when I see him during our Canons' retreat in Burlington, WI.

Summer has begun, along with some very important feasts in the liturgical calendar. The heat of the summer should bring us to think of the warmth of the love of God. Since Easter, we have already had the feasts of Ascension, Pentecost, Corpus Christi, and will have the Feast of the Sacred Heart next Friday. The Love of the Sacred Heart is expressed to all of us through the priesthood. Please keep all seminarians receiving orders in your prayers. The five deacons to be ordained priests are mentioned in this bulletin on page 3.

In prayerful union, Canon Sequeira

COLLECTION FOR SISTER ADORERS

As we enter into the month of the Sacred Heart, we turn to ask you to assist our Sister Adorers in their house of formation in Naples, Italy. Your generosity is greatly needed to help contribute toward the necessities of daily life for our Sisters during their important years of formation as they prepare to profess their vows and enter into Institute apostolates around the world.

A collection for this purpose will be taken up on June 9 after all Masses.

WISDOM OF ST. FRANCIS DE SALES

The process of the purification of our souls is never finished, and will end only with our death. We must not be upset by our imperfections; instead, we must recognize them and learn to combat them. It is in fighting against our imperfections without being discouraged by them that our very perfection consists.

Do not become upset because you are tempted. The fact that the enemy puts up a fight against a soul is a sign that he does not possess it.

A new Member of Holy Mother Church

You are encouraged to offer a special prayer of Thanksgiving for Robert Jordan Tancer of St. Anthony of Padua Oratory who entered the Holy Catholic Church on Saturday, May 25, 2024

THE LAND WITHOUT A SUNDAY BY MARIA VON TRAPP (continued)

The following is an excerpt from the 1955 book "Around the Year with the Trapp Family," by Maria von Trapp of the Trapp Family Singers ("Sound of Music") fame.

In most homes the Sunday dinner was at noon. The afternoon was often spent in visiting from house to house, especially visiting the sick. The young people would meet on the village green on Sunday afternoons for hours of folk dancing; the children would play games; the grownups would very often sit together and make music. Sunday afternoon was a time for rejoicing, for being happy, each in his own way.

Until that night at Baron K.'s house we had done pretty much the same as everybody else. Saturday we had always kept as "Feierabend" for Sunday. There was cleaning on Saturday morning throughout the house, there was cleaning in all the children's quarters--desks and drawers and toys were put in order. There was the laying out of the Sunday clothes. There was the Saturday rosary, and then--early to bed.

On Sunday we often walked to the village church for High Mass, especially after we had started to sing. Later we used to go into the mountains with the children, taking along even the quite little ones, or we used to play an Austrian equivalent of baseball or volleyball, or we sat together and sang some of the songs we had collected ourselves on our hikes through the mountains. We also did a good deal of folk dancing, we had company come or we went visiting ourselves--just as everybody else used to do. And if anybody had asked us why we began our Sunday on Saturday in the late afternoon, why we celebrated our Sunday this way, we would have raised our eyebrows slightly and said, "Well, because that's the way it's always been done."

But when my husband and I were walking home that night from Baron K.'s house, we realized that our complacency--so prevalent among people in pre-war days--had received a rude shock. It dawned on us that we had taken something for granted that was, in reality, a privilege: namely, that we lived in a country where Sunday was not so much observed as it was celebrated as the day of the Lord. This was a new way of looking at things, and the light was still rather dim, but I can see now in retrospect that a new chapter in our life as a Christian family began that very night.

We were lucky. The priest who stayed with us at that time, saying Mass in our chapel, and who had become a close friend of the family, was in a very special way a "Sunday fan," as we teasingly called it.

"I don't know what is the matter with Father Joseph," my husband had remarked to me at various times. "He always hints that we don't make enough of the Lord's Day. Why, we stop work on Saturday when the "Feierabend" begins; like everybody else, we get ready for Sunday by preparing our Sunday clothes, going to Confession, reading the Epistle and Gospel. On Sunday we go to Mass together with our children, we have a good Sunday breakfast, later in the day we go visiting. If there's anyone sick among our friends, we try to see him. We spend the day together as a family, as it should be. We go for hikes with the children, or we play games, or we have some folk dancing, or we make music....I really don't know what he means."

I do know now. It is true that we spent the Day of the Lord as a family, praying, resting, and rejoicing together. I'm sure Father Joseph did not object to that. But what he felt was that we did it unthinkingly, as a matter of routine, because everybody in Austria in those days did it like this. It had become a tradition. Father Joseph must have sensed the great danger to a nation once people observe religious customs only because "everybody does it" or "for hundreds of years it has been done this way." He knew that every generation has to rediscover for its own use the inheritance that has been handed down from its ancestors. Otherwise all those beautiful old customs, religious or other, lose their vitality and become museum pieces. Father Joseph noticed that increasingly people were answering, when asked why they observed certain rites, "because we have always done it that way," and he was alarmed. What he was most concerned about, however, was the celebration of Sunday.

On the crucial night, we decided that we would get together with Father Joseph the very next day and ask him to tell us all we didn't know about Sunday. So we asked him to have a cup of coffee with us. If he had a weakness, it was for coffee. With this, one could lure him always. Smiling in anticipation, he took his cup when my husband asked quite casually, "Father, would you mind telling us all about Sunday and why you were so upset when we once wanted to go to a movie on Saturday night, or when Rupert and Werner took their bicycles apart on a Sunday afternoon?"
